Rating Action: Moody's Ratings upgrades Ontex to B2; stable outlook

17 May 2024

Milan, May 17, 2024 -- Moody's Ratings (Moody's) has today upgraded Ontex Group NV's (Ontex or the company) long-term corporate family rating (CFR) to B2 from B3 and its probability of default rating (PDR) to B2-PD from B3-PD. Concurrently, Moody's has upgraded to B2 from B3 the rating on the €580 million senior unsecured notes due July 2026 issued by Ontex. The outlook on all ratings remains stable.

The ratings upgrade reflects Moody's expectation that Ontex will maintain positive momentum in operating performance over the next 12-18 months, leading to improved credit metrics more commensurate with a B2 rating. "The strong operating results in 2023 and the so far successful implementation of its business transformation plan have increased Ontex's financial flexibility to withstand the intrinsic volatility of the markets where it operates and to compensate for the smaller business perimeter, now focused on the retail-branded disposable personal hygiene products in Europe and North America", says Giuliana Cirrincione, Moody's lead analyst for Ontex.

The rating agency now expects that the Moody's adjusted leverage for Ontex, including the EBITDA contribution from non-core operations yet to be divested, will range between 5x-5.5x by the end of 2024, which is well below the 6.5x Moody's had previously anticipated. Moody's-adjusted free cash flow will turn sustainably positive from 2025, supported by business expansion in North America, continued focus on cost-efficiencies and lower restructuring charges.

RATINGS RATIONALE

Ontex's financial performance has improved significantly since Q3 2022, as the company has been able to restore its profitability close to pre-pandemic levels and reduce financial leverage – measured as Moody's adjusted gross debt to EBITDA – to below 6x as of December 2023, which marks the lowest point ever achieved since 2019.

While price increases in 2022 and 2023 were key to grow EBITDA and improve margins in response to the high input cost inflation, the company has also started to successfully execute on its business transformation plan. This has resulted in large cost-savings and close to neutral (on a Moody's adjusted basis) free cash flow in the year, despite the restructuring costs incurred to improve operational efficiency. Operating performance has also improved within the group's held-for-sale subsidiaries in the emerging markets, while at the same time Ontex has managed to divest a large portion of its non-core assets and used the proceeds to repay financial debt, further supporting leverage reduction. As of April 2024, held-for-sale operations in Pakistan, Brazil and Turkey have not been divested yet and, according to the company's plans, further progress will be made in 2024.

The rating agency now expects that the Moody's adjusted leverage for Ontex – including both core and non-core operations yet to be divested – will range between 5x-5.5x by the end of 2024, which is well below the 6.5x Moody's had previously anticipated. Leverage trajectory in 2024 will, to a degree, hinge on the timing of planned business divestitures. It also reflects primarily Moody's assumption that sales decline in Europe due to lower selling prices will be modest and will be fully offset by sustained volume growth in North America, where the private label segment for disposable personal hygiene products is still underpenetrated.

Cost-savings will continue to support profit margin improvement, more than offsetting the restructuring costs which will be substantial in 2024 and will then reduce steadily from 2025. Moody's also assumes a lower EBITDA contribution from non-core operations as they progressively exit the group's perimeter over the next 12-18 months.

According to Moody's forecasts, adjusted free cash flow will turn positive in 2025 in the range of €15 million to €30 million, to reflect continued volume gains in North America and profit margin expansion driven by lower restructuring charges. This is despite the company is increasing its capital spending to around 6% of its core market sales (compared to minimum capex needs of around 3% of core market sales) to support further business growth in North America. Ontex's operations in the region are already up and running and current trading conditions provide some comfort that volume ramp-up will continue. However, Moody's cautions that Ontex's expansion plan in North America carries some execution risk due to its relatively small regional footprint and the competitive industry landscape, which is also highly susceptible to changes in raw materials prices.

Furthermore, upon refinancing of its €580 million 3.5% senior unsecured fixed-rate bond due in July 2026, the company will likely experience an uptick in the interest cash bill. This increase is expected to constrain the improvement in free cash flow going forward. Nonetheless, Moody's anticipates that the rise in interest costs will be manageable, given the continued EBITDA growth in core markets and adequate liquidity, including tight working capital management and potential further divestments.

Ontex's B2 CFR reflects (1) its leading position in the disposable personal hygiene products market in Europe, with good product diversification; (2) the less cyclical nature of its products, especially in the retailer-branded segment which is Ontex's core business; (3) the organic growth prospects associated with the expansion plan in North America; and (4) the financial flexibility coming from the potential disposal of the remaining noncore assets in its emerging markets, which partly mitigates the smaller perimeter.

Ontex's CFR is constrained by (1) the exposure to significant raw material price volatility and to foreign currency fluctuations, which add pressure on profitability and cash flow generation; (2) the price-competitive nature of the industry and the strong bargaining power of large retailers; and (3) a degree of execution risk on the company's expansion plan in North America and its ongoing value-creation initiatives.

LIQUIDITY

Ontex's liquidity is adequate, backed by €180 million in cash as of March 2024 (including cash from discontinuing operations), and approximately €130 million available under its €242.5 million revolving credit facility (RCF) due in December 2025. The adequate liquidity assessment is also underpinned by Moody's assumption that Ontex will address the refinancing of its 2026 notes in a timely fashion, that is, at least a year before maturity.

According to Moody's forecasts, the available cash balance and the progressively improving internal cash generation capacity will abundantly cover all basic cash requirements, including ongoing restructuring costs in 2024, modest working capital needs to support growth (incl. the use of factoring), and both maintenance and expansionary capital spending of around €140 million annually (incl. the portion related to the lease repayment). While the exact timeline for the divestiture of the company's operations in Brazil and Turkey remains uncertain, the rating agency notes that Ontex does not rely on these sale proceeds to finance any of its mandatory cash needs.

Ontex's RCF is subject to a minimum liquidity covenant, and a net leverage covenant tested semiannually with progressive step-downs over time. Moody's anticipates the company will maintain adequate capacity under these covenants.

STRUCTURAL CONSIDERATIONS

The B2 rating on the €580 million senior unsecured 3.5% fixed-rate notes due July 2026 is in line with the CFR. All liabilities within the capital structure rank pari passu among themselves and the notes are guaranteed by material subsidiaries representing a minimum of 70% of consolidated EBITDA.

We assume the standard 50% family recovery rate to reflect the presence of both notes and bank debt within the company's capital structure.

RATIONALE FOR THE STABLE OUTLOOK

The stable outlook reflects Moody's expectation that Ontex will improve its Moody's adjusted leverage to 4.5x-5x over the next 12-18 months and its adjusted free cash flow to moderately positive levels, on the back of stable operating performance in Europe, business expansion in North America and continued focus on cost controls. The stable outlook also assumes that Ontex will refinance its 2026 bond in a timely fashion and with a manageable increase in the cost of debt, as well as a moderately positive earnings contribution from non-core operations until these are fully divested.

FACTORS THAT COULD LEAD TO AN UPGRADE OR DOWNGRADE OF THE RATINGS

Ontex's ratings could be upgraded if business expansion in North America and the ongoing business transformation plan result in materially higher-than-expected sales and EBITDA growth, leading to a Moody's adjusted leverage sustainably below 5x, consistently positive free cash flow, and Moody's adjusted EBITA margin maintained in the mid-to-high single digit percentages. An upgrade would also require that the company improves its liquidity, including long-dated debt maturities and comfortable capacity under financial covenants.

Ontex's ratings could be downgraded if operating performance weakens significantly as a result of fierce competition in core markets or poor execution of the company's transformation plan. Quantitatively, this would require a Moody's adjusted leverage sustained above 6x, consistently negative free cash flow, Moody's-adjusted EBITA/interest expense declining below 1.5x and Moody's adjusted EBITA margins declining in the low-single digit percentage for a prolonged period. A deterioration in liquidity due to reduced capacity under financial covenants could also lead to a downgrade.
